Preface

THIS catalogue is designed to be a convenient reference list of standard and up-to-date books; a practical guide, with many suggestions for the lawyer or student who may desire to purchase a book or a library. We have listed our own publications where we consider that they rightly belong, and where we hope they may always be found—"in the front." We will gladly furnish circular matter and other information regarding any of them.

The list of standard text-books has been carefully revised, and contains only the modern standard treatises which are now in print. An index to subjects in this list may be found in the back of the catalogue. The list of special local treatises, arranged by states, has been carefully compiled. It will undoubtedly be appreciated.

Our pamphlet, "Suggestions for Building Up a Law Library," an announcement of which appears on page vii, has been prepared especially for young practitioners and students, and will be sent without charge on request. It is replete with suggestions, and may be read profitably by the experienced lawyer or librarian.

The list of American Reports, Digests, and Statutes has been carefully revised. The abbreviations are confined to American Reports and law publications which are usually cited by the courts.

We buy and sell secondhand books, and will be pleased to examine your lists. Our stock of new and secondhand books is very large and complete. We shall be pleased to receive a list of your wants.

Correspondence is invited and will receive prompt attention.

Suggestions for Building Up a Law Library

MANY requests come to us from young lawyers and others for advice as to the books which it is necessary or desirable for them to have in order to enter the active practice. In order to answer these requests in a comprehensive way, we have prepared a little booklet in which we briefly describe the various classes of law books in general use, and briefly and impartially state the importance of each in the make-up of the library.

We will gladly send a copy of this pamphlet on request, without charge.

How the Decennial Digest Supplements Text-Books

ALL TEXT-BOOKS cite authorities in support of the author's statements. Some cite only the leading authorities, and only a few pretend to cite all of the authorities. Cases decided subsequent to the publication of a text-book may support or may overrule the text. The question is, how can one find these later cases which bear upon the text under discussion.

The one simple and direct way is through the complete table of American Cases published in the Decennial Digest. This table includes every reported case down to 1906 inclusive.

The use of this table is simple.

Select from your text-book any case cited in support of your proposition Find this case in the Decennial Digest Table, which for convenience is arranged in one single alphabet. When your case is located, you will discover that in addition to the title the table shows where that case has been reported and also the topic and section under which it is digested in the Century or in the Decennial Digest. Cases reported down to 1896 inclusive are digested in the Century. Cases reported from 1897 to 1906 inclusive are digested in the Decennial. Turn to the topic and section of that Digest to which reference is made, and you will find the case cited from the text-book. With it, under the same section, are grouped all other cases in point covered by that Digest.

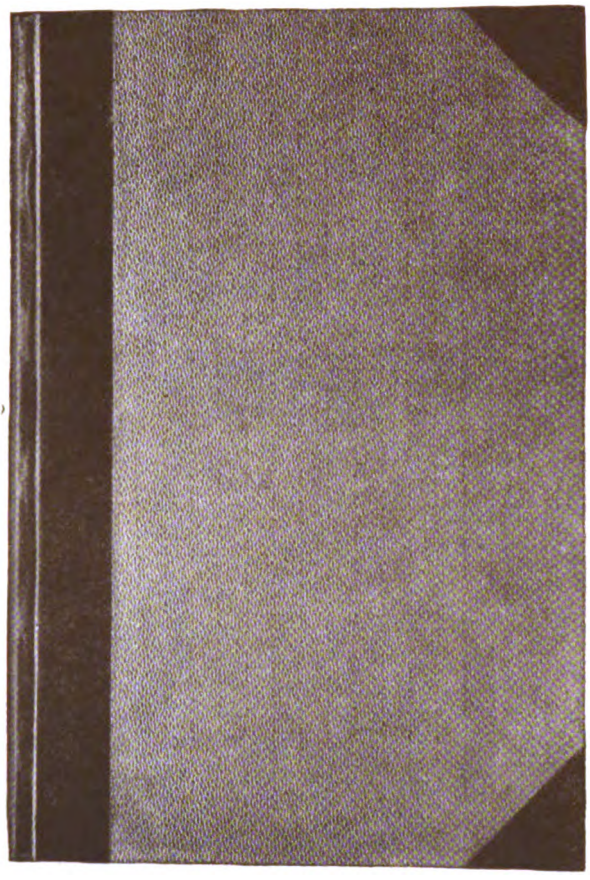

If the case from the text-book is digested in the Century, cases later than 1896 will be found in the corresponding place in the Decennial Digest and in the American Digest to date. If the case cited from the text-book is digested in the Decennial, all of the later cases will be found there, and under the same topic and section in the American Digest, Key-Number Series, which supplements the Decennial Digest.

In order to bring your search absolutely down to date, the investigation of the American Digests should be supplemented by referring to the same topic and section in the Reporter Indexes—both in the bound volumes and in the weekly Advance Sheets—for cases not yet digested.

This brings your search down to the cases reported last week.

BAILEY, (W. F.)—The Law of Master's Liability for Injuries to Servant. 1894. $6.00 net.

Judge Bailey has made a special study of this branch of the law, and his experience at the bar and on the bench has peculiarly fitted him to speak upon it. The purchase of the book has been specifically recommended to all their attorneys by the general counsel of several employers' liability insurance companies, and it has already had a very large sale among railroad and corporation lawyers, as well as among lawyers who make a specialty of personal injury cases.

(Black's Constitutional Law)

BLACK, (H. CAMPBELL.)—On Constitutional Law. 3d Ed. 1910. (In the Hornbook Series.) 1 vol. Buckram, $3.75 net.

This book contains a condensed review of all the leading principles and settled doctrines of American constitutional law, whether arising under the federal constitution or those of the individual states. These principles and doctrines are stated in the form of a series of brief rules, or propositions, numbered consecutively throughout the book, and are explained, amplified and illustrated in the subsidiary text, and supported by the citation of pertinent authorities.

The new edition contains the Key-Number Annotations. That is to say, for every point of law which is stated or discussed in the text, and in support of which cases are cited, there is added to the author's note a citation to the section or sections in the Decennial Digest or in the American Digest Key Number Series under which all cases directly involving that point have been digested. A similar citation to the Century Digest is given, except where the principle involved is one on which no case law existed prior to 1897.

(Black's Dillon on Removal of Causes)

BLACK, (H. CAMPBELL.)—On the Removal of Causes. Based on Judge Dillon's well-known treatise. 1898. 1 vol. $4.00 net.

Judge Dillon's standard work had become practically obsolete, owing to the radical changes in the law of the subject caused by the legislation of congress, and the great accumulation of new cases under the act of 1887; and it was found impossible to carry it forward satisfactorily in the form of an amended edition. It was, therefore, placed in Mr. Black's hands to be rewritten. In its present form it is a new, complete, and systematic treatise, containing practical suggestions as to the drafting of papers and the proper method of procedure.

Table of Contents

Chapter

I. The Removal Acts: Covering the various acts from 1789 to 1887.

II. The Right of Removal: Is statutory; how waived or removal prevented.

III. What Suits are Removable: Nature of suits removable; cases excluded; proceedings, etc.

IV. Enforcement of Civil Rights Acts: Statutes authorizing removal; grounds; practice.

V. Prosecutions of Federal Officers: What persons have right of removal; requisites of petition; practice, etc.

Chapter

VI. The Amount in Controversy: When amount is material; plaintiff's demand; counterclaims and defenses; joinder, etc.

VII. Parties Entitled to Removal: Considering nonresidents, corporations, aliens, assignees, etc.

VIII. Citizenship as a Ground for Removal: Citizenship and domicile distinguished; nominal parties; various classes of parties, etc.

IX. Citizenship of Corporations: Considering the various phases of such citizenship, and covering municipal and alien corporations, partnerships, unincorporated associations, etc.

(Black's Law Dictionary)

BLACK, (H. CAMPBELL.)—A Dictionary of Law, Containing Definitions of the Terms and Phrases of American and English Jurisprudence, Ancient and Modern, Including the Principal Terms of International, Constitutional and Commercial Law, with a Collection of Legal Maxims and Numerous Select Titles from the Civil Law and Other Foreign Systems. The dictionary is equipped with Denison's Index. The work also includes an exhaustive and comprehensive Table of Law Abbreviations. 2d Ed. 1910. Buckram, $6.00 net.

It was found that each of the existing law dictionaries contained a large number of titles not found in the others. Mr. Black's book covers all the dictionary matter in all the others. At the same time, it is not incumbered with encyclopedic matter, and does not attempt to invade the province of the text-book or digest, but reserves all its space for concise and reliable definitions of legal terms and phrases.

(Black on Statutory Construction)

BLACK, (H. CAMPBELL.)—On the Construction and Interpretation of Laws. 1896. (In the Hornbook Series.) Buckram, $3.75 net.

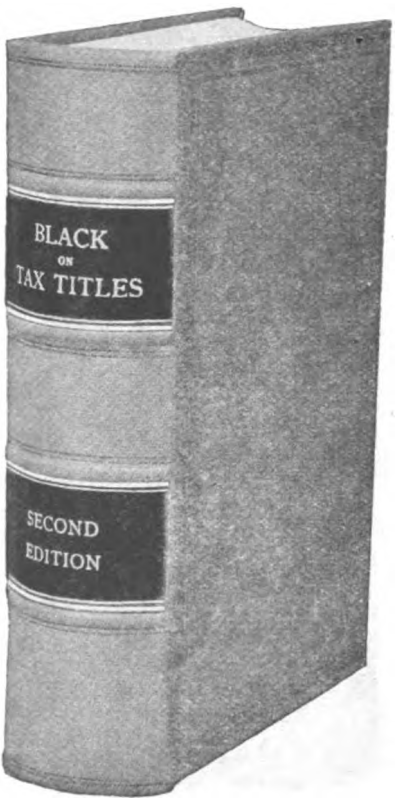

The rules for construing written laws, whether constitutional or statutory, have been worked out by Mr. Black from the primary sources,—the decided cases,—and wrought into a compact, complete, well-defined system. Under the "Hornbook" arrangement of the text, the black-letter paragraphs, which express these rules in logical and progressive order, practically constitute a code for such interpretation. Ample explanations and illustrations are given in the subsidiary text. An important chapter is added to consider the principle of stare decisis, the doctrine of precedents, the method of distinguishing between decisions and dicta, etc.

BRIEF MAKING AND THE USE OF LAW BOOKS.—Edited by Roger W. Cooley. 2d edition. 1909. Buckram, $2.50 net.

This work, intended for the law student, the law clerk, and the young practitioner, comprises an "Introduction," by William M. Lile, Dean of the Univ. of Va. Law School; "Where to Find the Law," by Alfred F. Mason, Editor of American Law School Review; "How to Use Decisions and Statutes," by Eugene Wambaugh, Prof. Harvard Univ. Law School; "How to Find the Law," by Roger W. Cooley; "The Trial Brief," by Edson R. Sunderland, Professor of Law, University of Michigan; "The Brief on Appeal," by Henry S. Redfield, Prof. Columbia Univ. Law School. The book shows the best way to search out what may be wanted from the bewildering mass of legal publications, and how to use the matter at hand properly and effectively in preparing brief or argument. It also contains tables, giving the main titles of standard publications and law abbreviations.

This addition to the Hornbook Series presents the modern law of Suretyship in the concise and systematic form made popular by the Hornbooks. With the growth of the credit system, contracts of suretyship have become more common and important, and the numerous rights involved make the subject a very technical one. This convenient and up to date handbook is just the thing for a quick survey of the whole subject.

The formulated principles and rules of the law are numbered and printed in black-letter type, and these paragraphs form a terse synopsis of the subject. An explanation and elaboration of these principles, printed in different type, immediately follows the black-letter. This explains, illustrates and distinguishes the formulated principles, and forms the treatise proper. The notes, in still different type, contain a copious citation of authorities, including the leading and most important cases.

(Clark's Criminal Law)

CLARK, (WM. L., JR.)—On Criminal Law (not including Procedure). (In the Hornbook Series.) Second Edition. 1902. Buckram, $3.75 net.

This work is in the Hornbook style, according to which the fundamental principles are printed in bold type, and arranged in synoptical form. This enables the practitioner to quickly review and refresh his knowledge of the subject in its general relations. The subsidiary text discusses and illustrates the principles, and the authorities cited are given in notes. The second edition has been carefully revised and brought down to date by F. B. Tiffany. Much new matter has been added and a number of chapters entirely rewritten.

(Clementson's Special Verdicts and Findings by Juries)

CLEMENTSON, (GEORGE B.)—A Manual on Special Verdicts and Special Findings by Juries. 1905. $3.75 net.

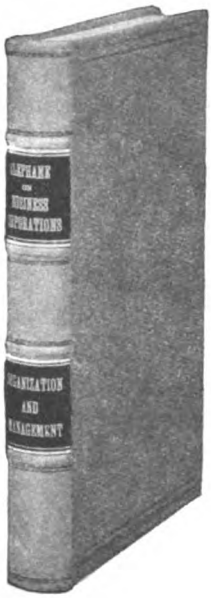

This manual deals with the practice of requiring the jury to find specially on particular questions of fact involved in the case, instead of bringing in merely a general verdict for one or the other party. This practice is established in more than half of our states and territories, yet this is the first distinct treatise on the subject. The work is thoroughly practical. Both statutes and decisions have been studied in the light of actual experience, and the discussion and conclusions relate to questions that arise in actual practice.

(Cooley's Briefs on Insurance)

COOLEY, (ROGER W.)—Briefs on the Law of Insurance. 1905. 5 volumes, including Index and Table of Cases. Buckram or Sheep, $27.00 net.

The aim of this new and practical work is to take up every question that has been raised in relation to the contract of Insurance and to brief the law applying to such question,—not only to state what the decisions of the courts have been, but also to show, as far as possible, the reasons for such decisions and the theories on which the courts have distinguished or attempted to reconcile apparently conflicting cases. With the exception of the older philosophical treatises, the text-books relating to this branch of the law deal to a large extent with the general principles. This work studies the insurance authorities in the same way that a lawyer does when preparing his brief.

(George on Partnership)

GEORGE, (WM.)—On Partnership. (In the Hornbook Series.) 1897. Buckram, $3.75 net.

This treatise has been written in the light of the recent cases (1860–1897), which have revolutionized the law of partnership. The very foundations on which the earlier standard text-writers based their discussions have been overturned by these cases, making a late text-book (instead of a late edition) a necessity in investigating questions in this branch of the law. Especial attention has been paid to the following points: (a) What constitutes a partnership; effect of sharing profits; development of modern doctrine; discordant cases. (b) Assumption of debts by incoming partner. (c) Priorities of partners and firm, and separate creditors in firm, and separate property. (d) Limited partnership. (The last topic is exhaustively considered. All the cases and all the statutes are cited.)

HOPKINS, (EARL P.)—On Real Property. (In the Hornbook Series.) 1896. Buckram, $3.75 net.

In this treatise the mere curiosities of English law and the interesting but useless legal antiquities sometimes found in books on this subject have been excluded, and only so much of the history of the law of real property has been included as is necessary for an understanding of the present situation. The intent has been to present a clear-cut picture of the English system as introduced into this country, and, with this as a basis, to explain the effect of the statutory changes which have been made in many parts of that system. Some 10,000 cases are cited.

This book furnishes a clear and concise presentment of the whole subject of Admiralty Law, a summary of pleading and practice, and an appendix giving in full the text of the important admiralty statutes. It is particularly timely in view of the rapid expansion in American shipping, and the urgent need for a treatise on this important, but seldom understood, branch of jurisprudence, that is adapted for a student, and for the general practitioner that will enable him to answer the questions regarding admiralty law that arise in the ordinary routine of practice. The distinctive Hornbook features will be found of special value for this purpose. Mr. Hughes' long experience and high standing as an admiralty specialist and instructor has particularly fitted him to prepare this treatise, and his treatment of the mooted questions, such as damages for fatal injuries, etc., will be considered of exceptional interest by the admiralty specialists.

The plan of this book is to present in bold type a brief statement by the editor of the vital characteristics of the action or pleading to be studied; then to give, in smaller type, precedents of the very pleadings themselves, chosen from classic pens; then, in ordinary type, cases which illumine the action or pleading discussed. The origin and evolution of each of the several actions have been carefully traced, and the characteristics of those actions in developed law have been dwelt upon at length.

It has been claimed that more cases are appealed because of alleged error in admitting or rejecting evidence than for any other single reason. McKelvey on Evidence is a book that will help the lawyer to determine quickly how the courts view these debatable points. It presents the modern law, treating clearly and directly of Judicial Notice, Questions of Law and Fact, Burden of Proof, Presumptions, Admissions, Confessions, Matters Excluded, Character, Opinion Evidence, Hearsay, Witnesses, Examination of Witnesses, Writings, Demurrers to Evidence, etc.

These cases were selected by Dr. Martin, Dean of the Law Department, Univ. of Missouri and Ex-Judge of the Missouri Supreme Court Commission, with a view to giving the student convenient access to actual cases in which the leading principles of equity jurisdiction have been either evolved or applied. Notes have been appended to many of the cases which will enable the student or practitioner to extend and widen his labors by the study of analogous or qualifying cases.

The cases are arranged mostly in accord with the classification adopted in Bispham's Equity.

MARTIN, (ALEXANDER.) — Civil Procedure at Common Law. 1899. Buckram, $3.50 net.

This work is the outcome of the author's experience as an instructor in civil procedure, and consists of fourteen chapters arranged somewhat in the order in which an action at law makes its way through the courts. The greater part of the work is devoted to the exposition of the pleadings. The author's aim has been to present to the student in a precise and orderly form the common-law system as it existed in its day.

The subject of damages possibly more than any other division of the law, is of relatively modern development. Even at the beginning of the nineteenth century, the functions of the court and the jury in the estimation of damages were not clearly distinguished. It was not until quite recent times that the court undertook to prescribe definite rules which should restrain and guide the jury's rather arbitrary discretion. The development of the law in many topics (as, for example, in "Mental Suffering") is almost entirely American.

(Minor and Wurts on Real Property)

MINOR, (RALEIGH C.) & WURTS, (JOHN.)—On Real Property. 1910. 1 vol. 1000 pages. Buckram, $5.00 net.

A book for law school use. Its purpose is to state the Common Law of Real Property, showing wherein it has been repealed in this country as contrary to the fundamental laws and the spirit of our institutions, and to set out such statutory changes as are common to all states. All teachers of Real Property appreciate the difficulties of the student's mind in dealing with this most difficult branch of the law, and in reading the new book by Professors Minor and Wurts, one's attention is quickly drawn to the clever way in which many of these difficulties are smoothed out and made clear. The authors' complete grasp of the subject, their thoroughness of analysis, their powers of demonstration, and the care with which they have avoided ambiguous statements make the book the cleanest-cut exposition of the Common Law of Real Property that has been produced in this country.

NORTON, (CHARLES P.)—On Negotiable Bills, Notes, and Checks. (In the Hornbook Series.) 3d Ed. by F. B. Tiffany. 1900. Buckram, $3.75 net.

This work is designed to furnish the practicing lawyer with a handbook of the law of this subject. It is concise enough to present a carefully arranged discussion of the whole subject, including the new so-called "National Negotiable Instruments Law" which has been adopted in many of the States, in 552 pages, yet comprehensive enough to present all the general principles of the subject, with their exceptions, and to indicate their ramifications. The arrangement is that of the Hornbook Series.

(Ostrander on Fire Insurance)

OSTRANDER, (D.)—On Fire Insurance. 2d Ed. Rewritten and enlarged. 1897. $6.00 net.

This is the standard authority on the subject, and contains an able and critical analysis of the cases upon every question that has arisen in fire insurance litigation, conflicting cases being contrasted, distinguished, criticised, and explained. It gives the reason for the contested conditions and stipulations in a policy, showing their equitable foundation. On the other side, it shows what circumstances will take the case out of the general rule.

(Shipman's Common-Law Pleading)

SHIPMAN, (BENJ. J.)—On Common-Law Pleading. (In the Hornbook Series.) 2d Ed. 1895. Buckram, $3.75 net.

This book embodies such of the principles and rules of common-law pleading as are still recognized and applied in this country, omitting such of those found in the old English system as have become obsolete in practice, except where, as in the case of special pleading, they are the foundation of the method now in use. It is recognized that a knowledge of the common-law system is of advantage, if, indeed, it is not essential, to a thorough understanding of both code and equity pleading.

(Wilson's International Law)

WILSON, (GEORGE GRAFTON.)—On International Law. 1910. (In the Hornbook Series.) 1 vol. Buckram, $3.75 net.

The assembling of the Peace Conference at The Hague in 1899 marks an epoch in the history of International Law. Its work has been amplified and extended in many directions by the Conference for the Revision of the Geneva Convention in 1906, by the Second Hague Conference in 1907, and by the International Naval Conference in 1908–1909. Mr. Wilson has taken an active part in the work of the most recent of these Congresses and his sources of information regarding all have been the most authentic. In this book he has inserted the text of the documents, treaties, and cases whenever possible, rather than substitute a briefer description of their contents. His long experience as a teacher of International Law and his eminent scholarship have thoroughly equipped him to write such a treatise on the subject. For a considerable period he has been professor of International Law at Harvard University and lecturer on the same topic at Brown University and at the United States Naval War College.

(Words and Phrases)

WORDS AND PHRASES JUDICIALLY DEFINED.—A Systematic Collection of the Judicial and Statutory Definitions, which are to be found scattered through the American Reports and Statutes. 8 vols. Buckram or Sheep, $18.00 delivered.

For a lawyer, the question likely to arise in connection with a word or phrase is as to its exact significance in some particular context, or in connection with some particular statement of facts. If it has been interpreted in that connection by the courts, it is of prime importance to him to know it. The arrangement is of course strictly alphabetical,—not topical. The paragraphs are full. They state the conditions of the case as fully as a good digest paragraph, showing how and in what connection the word or phrase occurs. The reasoning as well as the language of the court has been incorporated as far as practicable. Citations are given to the Reporters, the State Reports, the American Reports, the American Decisions, American State Reports and the Lawyers' Reports Annotated.

The National Reporter System

A perfect and complete substitute for the State Reports.

Every case reported in full and without abridgment within about thirty days after it has become final.

Every point in every recent case exhaustively and exclusively annotated by the Key-Number Annotations, which give you command of every similar case in point.

In a Direct Comparison of the Seven State Reporters and the corresponding State Reports, note the superiority of the Reporters

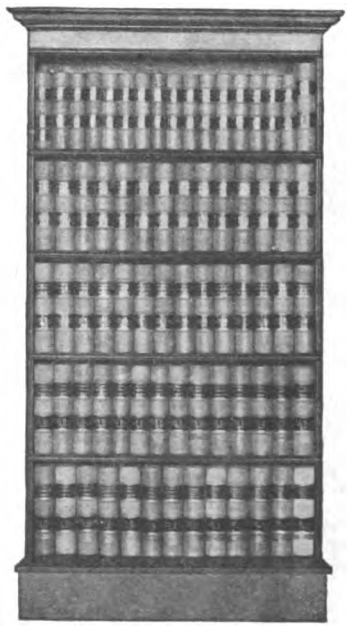

As to compactness: 46 bookcase sections instead of 207.

As to convenience: 617 volumes to handle in place of 2,695.

As to cross-reference: Cases cited from the State Reports by page and volume, with or without the name of the case, can be readily found in the Reporters, by means of the Reporter blue label tables and Blue Books.

Vols. 1 to 117 New York Supplement

These 117 volumes of the New York Supplement contain all the cases in the 334 volumes of State Reports shown on the opposite page. They also contain a sufficient number of cases omitted from the State Reports to make over 50 additional volumes of Hun and Miscellaneous Reports.

The Digest covers Vols. 1 to 110 of the Supplement, and gives the State Reports citations as well as the Supplement citations. It shows the history of the case in higher courts whenever the decision has been affirmed, reversed or modified.

Books 1 to 30 Federal Cases

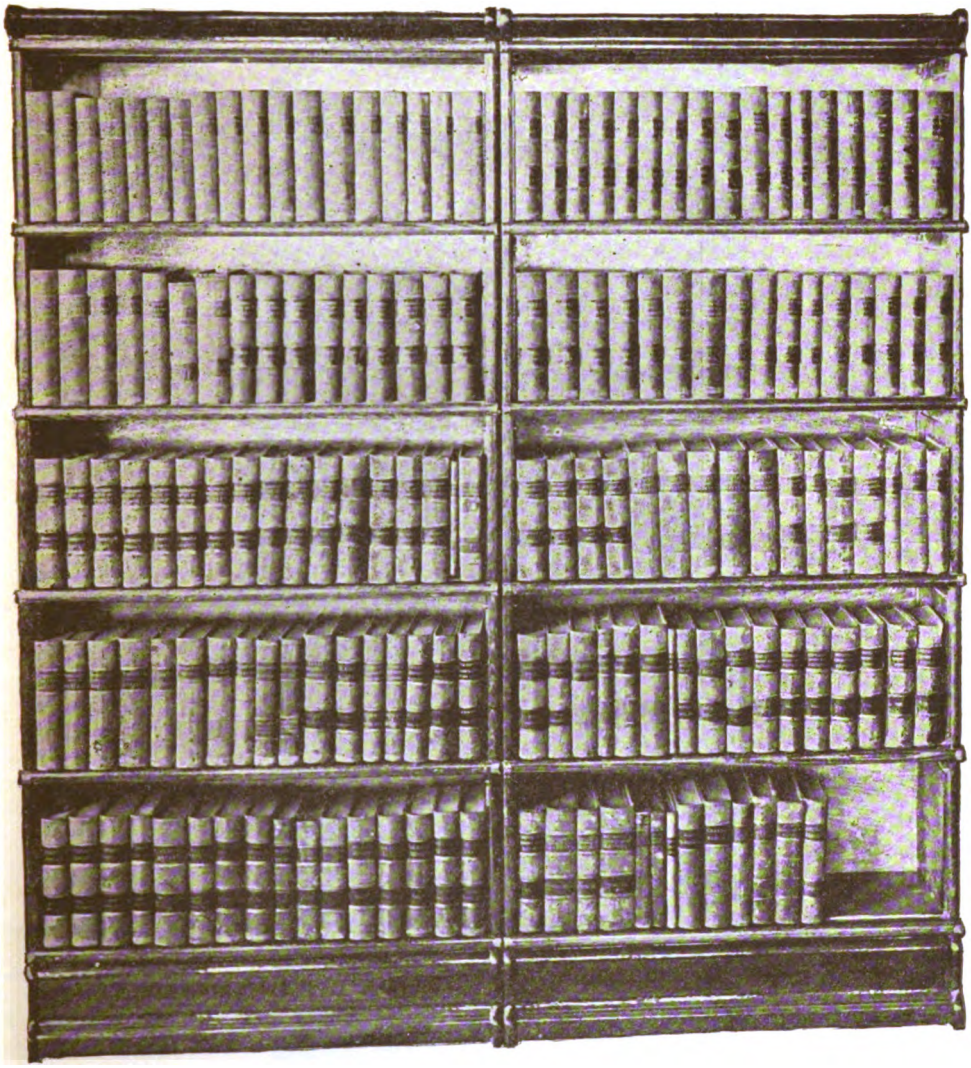

These 30 volumes of the Federal Cases contain all the cases in the 163 volumes of Circuit and District Court Reports down to the time of the Federal Reporter, and, in addition, some 6,300 cases not found in the original Reports —enough matter to make from 50 to 60 additional volumes.

A One-Volume Digest  completely covers the set.

The Federal Reporter

Volumes 1 to 179

Digitized by Google

The Federal Reporter contains the exclusive report of the U. S. Circuit and District Court opinions. It began publication in 1880 and contains all decisions of the U. S. Circuit and District Courts since that time and all decisions of the U. S. Circuit Courts of Appeals since their origin in 1891.

This set is practically the official organ of the Federal Courts. It superseded the various fragmentary and incomplete series of Circuit and District Court Reports, all of which have long since ceased publication. The manuscript copies of opinions are supplied by the court officials, often under an express rule of the court.

All reports are submitted in proofs to the judges, and any revisionary changes desired are made before publication.

The standard character of the Federal Reporter is known to the bar everywhere, and it is probably the most popular single reporting publication in the field of legal literature.

As a rule, the judges of the U. S. Circuit and District Courts do not write opinions unless the question involved in a case is an important one. This process of elimination by the judges themselves stamps the cases they do report as of general interest and authority.

The plan of advance sheet publication insures promptness. All decisions are reported currently, and issued to subscribers in weekly advance sheets, which are afterwards followed by the permanent bound volumes. The subscription price is $3.50 a volume, delivered (including the weekly advance sheets without additional charge). About eight volumes a year.

The back volumes connect with the Federal Cases, making a continuous series of lower Federal Court decisions from the establishment of the courts down to date.

The Reporters are Annotated

Every point in every case is annotated to a complete "brief of authorities" through the
"Key-Number Annotations"

In the current Reporters the first catchword over each syllabus paragraph invariably states the topic, and the parenthetic number following designates the section of the topic, of the American Digest classification where that and every similar point will be indexed in the advance sheet and library editions of the National Reporter System and digested in the American Digest System, thus:

This is the Key-Number Annotation

1. DEDICATION (§ 64*)—MISUSER OR DIVERSION.

Property dedicated by donors to a particular public use cannot, at least without the exercise of the right of eminent domain, be appropriated to a use of a different character, in disregard of the rights of the donors and their legal representatives.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Dedication, Cent. Dig. § 107; Dec. Dig. § 64.*]

Furthermore

Every definition by the court of a word or phrase is set out in the syllabus and annotated to other definitions of that word or phrase by other courts as found in

"Words and Phrases Judicially Defined"

THE ANNOTATED ALABAMA REPRINT. Covering the 18 preliminary volumes and Vols. 1 to 80 Alabama, in 49 books. Everything in the original (including the paging) is preserved. Price $294.00 freight paid.

The annotations show where each case has been subsequently cited by the Supreme Court of Alabama; prior and subsequent reports of the same case; disposition of each case that has gone to the U. S. Supreme Court; the exact place in the Century Digest where cognate authorities have been collected and compared.

A special word as to the Century Digest references. This great fifty-volume work (accessible in almost every county and city) is a collection of all reported American decisions from the earliest times, carefully digested and systematically classified. Therefore, when your Reprint annotation refers you to a specific section of the Century in connection with a case, you will find there a complete collection of American authorities on the special point of law involved. This is invaluable material in brief-making; and it is material which no individual lawyer, even if he had a complete case-library to work from, could prepare without weeks of labor. It is, in fact, the synopsis of a complete brief.

MANNING'S UNREPORTED CASES. 1877–1880. 1 vol.
McGLOIN'S COURT OF APPEALS. 1881. 1 vol.

A COMPLETE SET OF LOUISIANA REPORTS consists of the Louisiana Reprint in 55 Books, La. Annuals 49 to 52 inc. (N. R. S. Ed.) and La. Reports Vols. 104 to 126 inc. Price $494.00 freight paid. (See page 211.)

The Annotated Louisiana Reprint covers the complete set from 1st Martin to 48th La. Ann., inclusive, and Manning's Unreported Cases. Everything in the original (including the paging) is preserved.

The annotations show where each case has been subsequently cited by the Supreme Court of Louisiana; prior and subsequent reports of the same case; disposition of each case that has gone to the U. S. Supreme Court; the exact place in the Century Digest where cognate authorities have been collected and compared.

A special word as to the Century Digest references. This great fifty-volume work (accessible in almost every county and city) is a collection of all reported American decisions from the earliest times, carefully digested and systematically classified. Therefore, when your Reprint annotation refers you to a specific section of the Century in connection with a case, you will find there a complete collection of American authorities on the special point of law involved. This is invaluable material in brief-making; and it is material which no individual lawyer, even if he had a complete case library to work from, could prepare without weeks of labor. It is, in fact, the synopsis of a complete brief.

MICHIGAN DIGEST ANNOTATED

The Michigan Digest Annotated, compiled under the American Digest Classification Scheme, by the Editorial Staff of the American Digest System, covers H. W. and D., 4 vols., Brown's and Howell's Nisi Prius; vols. 1 to 148 and a part of vol. 149 Michigan Reports, and the Michigan cases in vols. 1 to 112 Northwestern Reporter, with parallel references showing where the same cases have been reported in vols. 1 to 14 Detroit Legal News. The date of each decision is shown in the digest paragraph. Where cases have been carried to the U. S. Supreme Court, the final decision is indicated with references to the United States Reports, in the official edition and also in the "Lawyers' Edition" and the Supreme Court Reporter. A complete table of cases digested is given, showing the exact column where each is digested, and giving the parallel citations to the volumes and pages where they are found in the different reports. A table of constitutional provisions and statutes construed is also added.

Under the heading of "Words and Phrases" will be found collected the judicial definitions scattered through the Reports. These authoritative definitions are quite as important in their own way as any other judicial holding, and grouped together they make an important section. The editors of the new Michigan Digest have not only had the widest experience in the general field, but they have recently prepared successful digests for Massachusetts (1906, 8 vols.), Virginia and West Virginia (1906, 5 vols.), Missouri (1905, 10 vols.), and Kentucky (1905, 5 vols.). The Michigan bar gets the benefit of this experience, and secures the best state digest ever issued, containing all the features of approved utility. Six large volumes. Buckram, $42.00 delivered.

case that has gone to the U. S. Supreme Court; the exact place in the Century Digest where cognate authorities have been collected and compared.

A special word as to the Century Digest references. This great fifty-volume work (accessible in almost every county and city) is a collection of all reported American decisions from the earliest times, carefully digested and systematically classified. Therefore, when your Reprint annotation refers you to a specific section of the Century in connection with a case, you will find there a complete collection of American authorities on the special point of law involved. This is invaluable material in brief-making; and it is material which no individual lawyer, even if he had a complete case library to work from, could prepare without weeks of labor. It is in fact, the synopsis of a complete brief.

THE MISSOURI DIGEST ANNOTATED

Compiled on the American Digest plan; including all decisions of the Supreme and Appellate Courts down to November, 1908.

Volumes of Reports included: Volumes 1–212 and parts of 213–214, Missouri Reports; volumes 1–132 and part of 133, Missouri Appeals Reports; Missouri cases in volumes 1–112, Southwestern Reporter; with parallel references to all Standard American Reports. Annotations under nearly every section point out the place in the Century and Decennial Digests where cases from all other states may be found. Every case is digested, including those omitted from the State Reports. Tables of cases digested show where each case is reported and the columns of the Digest where each point will be found. Tables of statutes and constitutional provisions construed point out the construction of every law which has been passed on by the courts. A complete topical cross-reference index is given in volume 11.

Complete in 13 volumes. $72.00 delivered.

Digests, etc.

THE OKLAHOMA DIGEST ANNOTATED.

2 vols. 1908. Buckram, $15.00 delivered.

Covers all the volumes of the Oklahoma Territory Reports, all the volumes of the Indian Territory Reports, all the decisions of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and of the United States Supreme Court, originating in Oklahoma or Indian Territory; all the Oklahoma and Indian Territory decisions reported in the Pacific and Southwestern Reporters.

The Arrangement

The American Digest Classification, under which this digest has been compiled, is already familiar to the Oklahoma Bar. It is used in the Century Digest, the American Digest, the General Digest, and in the digests and indexes of the Pacific, Southwestern and Federal Reporters. In fact, under the recommendation of the committee of the American Bar Association, it has become recognized as the standard classification, and has been adopted all over the country for state and general digests and legal indexes. In this Oklahoma Digest it has been applied to the law of Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory by editors who have worked under it for years, who understand its completeness and its flexibility, and are able to apply it with precision and consistency. Every up-to-date feature has been introduced to make the digest complete and practical. The scope-note and the analysis at the beginning of each subject give a birdseye view of the whole at a glance; and cross-references are inserted copiously to direct your search into the right channels.

The Annotations

Under nearly every section there is a note pointing out the place in the Century Digest where the same subject-matter is treated. The practical effect of this is to direct the reader to a complete collection of the cases in which that point of law has been passed upon, as shown in the published Reports for the entire country (some 5,000 volumes), with date, jurisdiction, and decision all shown. It is the material for a complete brief, classified to hand, which it would require weeks of work and unusual opportunities for research for any individual investigator to collect. If, therefore, you find few or no decisions on a given point in your Oklahoma Digest itself, the annotation under that heading will send you direct to a complete and carefully classified collection of the decisions on that point from the state appellate and federal courts of the entire country. The date of each decision is shown in the digest paragraph. Where cases have been carried to the U. S. Supreme Court, the final decision is indicated with references to the United States Reports, in the official edition and also in the Supreme Court Reporter and the "Lawyers' Edition." A complete table of cases digested is given, showing the exact column where each is digested, and giving the parallel citations to the volumes and pages where they are found in the different reports. A table of constitutional provisions and statutes construed is also added.

VIRGINIA AND WEST VIRGINIA DIGEST, ANNOTATED. 5 vols. Sheep or buckram, $37.50 delivered.

Covers vols. 1 to 103 Virginia Reports, vols. 1 to 56 West Virginia Reports, and Va. and W. Va. cases in vols. 1 to 51 Southeastern Reporter. The American Digest Classification scheme under which this digest has been compiled, is already familiar to the Bar of the Virginias. It is used in the Century Digest, the American Digest, the General Digest, and in the digests and indexes of the Southeastern Reporter. In fact, it has become recognized as the standard classification, and has been adopted all over the country for state and general digests. A very valuable feature of this Digest will be found in the annotations. Under nearly every section there is a note pointing out the place in the Century Digest where the same subject-matter is treated. The practical effect of this is to direct the reader to a complete collection of the cases in which that point of law has been passed upon, as shown in the published Reports for the entire country (some 5,000 volumes) with date, jurisdiction, and decision all shown. It is the material for a complete brief, classified to hand, which it would require weeks of work and unusual opportunities for research for any individual investigator to collect. A table of cases digested is given, showing the exact column where each is digested. This table gives parallel citations to the different reports. A table of constitutional provisions and statutes construed has also been added, in our desire to make the work in every way as complete as possible. The date of each decision is shown in the digest paragraph.

POLLARD'S ANNOTATED CODE OF VIRGINIA. Published by authority of the General Assembly. Edited by Jno. Garland Pollard, of the Richmond Bar. 2 vols. 1904. Sheep or buckram, $15.00 delivered.

This is the standard compilation of the statutes of Virginia. George Bryan said of it: "Upon Mr. Pollard's work there can be only one judgment from bench and bar, and that is, well done. It is far and away the best Code that the state has ever had." The index is an especially noteworthy feature. It has been prepared by the editorial staff of the Century Digest, and makes use of main heads and subheads which are familiar to the Virginia bar, supplementing these with numerous cross-reference heads. It is so full, clear, and logical that we feel sure it will be found of the greatest help in referring to the law. It makes 365 pages. Wide margins and high-finished paper suitable for pen and ink annotations are another feature to be noted.

POLLARD'S ACCUMULATIVE SUPPLEMENT. 1910. $7.50.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Grand Jury, Dec. Dig. § 36.*]

2. WITNESSES (§ 300*)—CORPORATIONS—SUBPŒNA DUCES TECUM—PRIVILEGE.

A corporation, when subpœnaed duces tecum to produce its books before a grand jury, cannot avail itself of the privilege of a witness under Const. U. S. Amend. 5, declaring that no person shall be compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against himself.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1402, 1402½; Dec. Dig. § 300.*]

*For other cases see same topic & § NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Rep'r Indexes

By marking each syllabus paragraph with the topic and section under which it will eventually appear in the American Digest System the lawyer is led from that syllabus to the exact place in the Digest where we, as digest makers, have placed the other cases on that same point

This is the KEY-NUMBER ANNOTATION

Simple, isn't it?

THE AMERICAN CASEBOOK SERIES

Volumes published to February 1, 1911

For description, see page 276

Digitized by Google

The American Casebook Series

The publication of the American Casebook Series was originated and planned by a number of prominent legal educators, who, as advocates of teaching law by the "Case Method," found that many casebooks in use not only devoted too little attention relatively to the inculcation of knowledge, but sacrificed unnecessarily knowledge to training.

The purpose of the American Casebook Series is to furnish law schools with a systematic series of casebooks, the volumes of which are moderate in price, constructed on a uniform plan, and which vary in size according to the importance, difficulty, and amount of time devoted to the subject. As training and knowledge should go hand in hand, training and knowledge are the keynotes of the Series.

The volumes published to February 1, 1911, are shown on the preceding page. The volumes in preparation are given below. For prices, see page 1.

(Gilmore on Partnership)

GILMORE, (E. A.)—On Partnership. (In the Hornbook Series.) 1911. Buckram. $3.75 net.

A clear, concise, and accurate statement of the law of Partnership, well adapted for the use of the practitioner or for the student. This volume contains the Key-Number Annotations. That is to say, for every point of law which is stated or discussed in the text, and in support of which cases are cited, there is added to the author's note a citation to the Key-Number section or sections in the Decennial Digest or in the American Digest, Key-Number Series, under which all cases directly involving that point have been digested. A similar citation to the Century Digest is given, except where the principle involved is one on which no case law existed prior to 1897.

VIRGINIA

VIRGINIA-WEST VIRGINIA DIGEST. Vol. 6. 1905–1911. This Digest is a supplement to the Virginia and West Virginia Digest published by us in 1906, and digests the cases since the time of that Digest, viz., from December, 1905, to February, 1911. The reports included are vols. 52 to 69 S. E. Rep.; vols. 105 to 110 Va. Repts., and part of vol. 104; vols. 59 to 66 W. Va. Repts., and part of vol. 58; also parts of Virginia and West Virginia volumes not yet published, but reported in the Southeastern Reporter. In this Digest every section under every topic is preceded by two section numbers, one in black-face type and one in parenthesis in plain type. The black-face section number refers to the original Virginia-West Virginia Digest, where all prior matter on the same point will be found under the identical section number. The section number in parenthesis is the real Key-Number, and refers to the Decennial Digest, to the Key-Number Series, to the Indexes in the Advance Sheets, and in the current bound volumes of the Southeastern Reporter, and, in fact, to all Key-Number Digests and Indexes. Through this double series of section numbers one may turn from a given place in this Digest to the exact place in the original Virginia-West Virginia Digest, by means of the black-letter section number, or one may turn from this Digest to any Key-Number Digest or Index, by means of the section number in parenthesis. One volume. 1330 pages. $7.50 delivered.

The National Reporter System

A full, complete, authentic series of American Law Reports, giving all decisions of all the Courts, State and Federal, in two forms:

First. In pamphlets issued weekly, giving the profession immediate information of all new cases.

Second. In bound volumes for permanent use in the library. These volumes are printed after the reports have been revised by the judges themselves.

Both forms are supplied to subscribers at one-fourth the cost of the corresponding State Reports.

Both the pamphlet advance sheets and the permanent bound volumes are made easily accessible and available for the use of the busiest practitioner by the most complete and thorough system of indexes and digests. Some of their advantages over other Reports are promptness, uniformity, economy of money, economy of space.
